Libya silent on reports of junta coup

By ANAN SAFADI, Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter

Libya maintained complete silence yesterday as conflicting reports continued on the overthrow of Libyan head of state Mu'ammer Gaddafi. Life in Libya was reported to be continuing normally. There were no reports of any emergency measures that would support claims that Gaddafi has been toppled in a coup staged by the members of the ruling 12-man junta which is now dominated by Libya's second-in-command, Abdul-Salam Jalloud. Radio Tripoli carried its usual programme and airports remained open. The British charge d'affaires in Tripoli reported that there were no soldiers in the streets. Nevertheless, there has been more than one indication that Libya is going through an acute crisis. Gaddafi has not been seen in public in the two days the rumours have been circulating.

Egypt's war budget nears $574m.

CAIRO (Reuters). — Egypt's Treasury Minister, Dr. Abdel-Asiz Mohammed Hegazi, has told the authoritative newspaper "Al-Ahram" that the country's military buildup imposed a heavy burden on the economy.

He said Egypt's military expenditure since the June, 1967 War had more than doubled, nearly reaching a record $574m. last year. He said in an interview that Egypt, in preparing for the battle to recover Israeli-occupied territory, was depending on its resources, apart from a $99m. annual subsidy paid by Saudi Arabia, Libya and Kuwait.

Egypt receives this sum to make up for the loss of Suez Canal revenues following a decision reached at an Arab conference in Khartoum.

Thousands fleeing Belfast

BELFAST (Reuters). — Some 5,000 Catholic women and children streamed out of battle-torn Belfast yesterday to escape a threatened new outbreak of death and destruction in Northern Ireland. As the trek began from several embattled Catholic districts here, violence continued unabated with two more deaths, making a total of at least 25 since hostilities resumed a week ago after a 13-day truce.

At Crossmaglen, near the border with the Irish Republic, a British Army explosives expert was blown up by a bomb he was examining in a milk churn — the sixth bomb disposal man to die since the violence started three years ago. In the village of Ligonell, five kms. outside Belfast, a Republican gunman was shot dead by British marines in an early morning gun battle. His body was found with a rifle beside it, a trail of blood from another wounded guerrilla leading away up a hill. In Londonderry 600 soldiers moved into the city centre in response to a plea from merchants whose shops have been devastated by a rash of bombings this past week.

Waldheim resolved to visit Middle East

United Nations Secretary-General Dr. Kurt Waldheim said in a weekend newspaper interview that he was resolved to visit the Middle East. But he said he would do so only when he is sure he can contribute to bringing about peace in the region. Dr. Waldheim, who made the statement to the Vienna paper "Die Presse," also said that he saw no alternative to the Jarring mission.

Lebanon wants P-o-W issue settled outside U.N.

BEIRUT (Reuters). — Acting Lebanese Prime Minister Albert Mikhael said here yesterday that the question of releasing six captured Syrian and Lebanese officers should be tackled without resorting to the United Nations. Dr. Mikhael was replying to a reporter's question on current contacts on convening a Security Council meeting to seek release of the five Syrians and one Lebanese officer captured inside Lebanese territory by an Israeli patrol last month. "At any rate, we shall be guided by expediency in this connection," he said. Lebanon's permanent U.N. delegate has been holding consultations with Lebanese and Syrian officials on a joint Syrian-Lebanese request for a Security Council meeting to discuss release of the officers. Also in Beirut, the Danish wife of Ghasan Kanafani, the P.F.L.P. spokesman killed in an explosion in Beirut, yesterday held Israel responsible for the incident. She also accused Western newspapers of complicity in the attack. "I am positive no commando organization had anything to do with it," Mrs. Anni Kanafani, looking pale and in mourning dress, told a press conference at her home. "It is Israel which is responsible for this cruel crime and the Western newspapers are accomplices," she said in a tremulous voice.

U.S. to resume Yemen aid

NEW YORK — U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers said on Friday that the U.S. had agreed to resume economic aid to Yemen, the "New York Times" reported yesterday. Rogers reportedly said the decision was made after his discussions in San'a on July 1 and 2, when diplomatic relations were resumed between Yemen and the U.S. Yemen had broken off relations during the Six Day War. Asked if the aid decision was tied to the resumption of relations, State Department spokesman Charles Bray said, "None whatsoever. Relations were resumed without any preconditions on either side."

Mr. Rogers said that the aid projects under consideration included rehabilitation of the water system in Taiz. He added that the aid extended would also include scholarships for Yemen students, assistance in developing drinking water for rural villages and engineering studies for highway development. "In addition U.S. food will continue to be distributed to needy Yemenis through an American voluntary agency," Mr. Rogers said. Yemen's Prime Minister Moahin Ahmed Al Aini, who is also Foreign Minister, is expected to arrive in Peking today for an official visit at the invitation of Communist China's Government, Peking said yesterday. "The forthcoming visit will further strengthen the friendly relations between the People's Republic of China and the Arab Republic of Yemen," the New China News Agency said. (INA, Reuters)

Eban: Time Solution for working Pakistan's language war

TEL AVIV. — Foreign Minister Abba Eban said last night that "time is working for us." Addressing the second plenary session of the ZOA convention at the Mann Auditorium here yesterday, he said "the cease-fire continues, except for one or two isolated cases. The balance of power has been kept, especially through the aid of the United States." The Minister added that Israel will not return to the old armistice line. He emphasized that the future map will only be made at the peace conference table. The session was opened by Dr. Max Nussbaum of Hollywood, past president of ZOA. (Earlier story, page 10)

Mariner finishes mapping entire surface of Mars

PASADENA, California (Reuters). — The U.S. spacecraft Mariner 9 has completed photo-mapping the entire surface of the planet Mars, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here announced on Friday. Laboratory officials said the tiny spacecraft has taken 7,100 photographs since going into orbit around Mars on November 13 last year. The mapping mission got off to an inauspicious start when it was discovered that the red planet was covered by a near-impenetrable dust haze from a recent dust storm. But the dust began to subside and latest photographs gave a clear view of the planet's surface, particularly of the north polar region which had not been photographed before. The Laboratory spokesman said the photographing would close down from now until October so Mariner could be prepared for a complicated experiment aimed at testing Einstein's relativity theory. In early September when Earth and Mars are on opposite sides of the sun, equipment on Mariner will be used to see if radiation slows down as it passes by the sun, as Einstein's theory predicts. Meanwhile, Pioneer 10, hurtling towards Jupiter, yesterday began the most dangerous part of its mission. It entered the 175-million-mile-wide asteroid belt, a giant doughnut-shaped ring around the sun of flying meteoroids and particles, some as big as the state of Alaska.

PRISONER EXCHANGE

SHOULD the Syrians decide to take the demand for the return of their five captured officers and one Lebanese back to the Security Council this week they may expect little more than support for the suggestion that there should be a general exchange of prisoners between Israel and the Arab states. Last night, Lebanon opposed a further appeal to the Security Council.

Nobody could be in a worse moral position to demand the return of men who were, as they claim, kidnapped than Syria, which did not hesitate to allow the Fatah to hold an Israeli watchman prisoner who had been abducted across the border at Metulla by saboteurs in 1970. Shmuel Rosenwasser, the watchman, was not returned for 14 long months, and then only in exchange for a Fatah terrorist, Mahmoud Hejazi, whose death sentence had been commuted to life imprisonment.

The Syrians are said to be willing to make a deal to return Israeli prisoners held by them. It cannot be supposed that they are mainly concerned to prevent leakages of information from their five intelligence officers, for it is now more than three weeks since their capture, and explanations seem to have been received immediately of the documents in their possession. Still, Syria has long had a military regime; the capture by Israel of men of senior rank in the Lebanon was a rude shock, and their speedy return is a matter of prestige and importance, for which they would be prepared to pay with the return of the Israeli prisoners. The arranging of such an exchange would not be beyond the strictly limited powers of the Arab League.

The problem is Egypt. The Egyptian prisoners held by Israel are of no special social or military importance. It will also be remembered that Egypt had almost to be pressured into taking back 6,000 war prisoners from Israel after the Six Day War. It was felt in Egypt at the time that their continued absence could help to inflame anti-Israeli feeling, while there was no knowing on the other hand, whether the men might not return after their captivity with a different view of Israel from that presented by the official Egyptian organs.

In general we have reason to be grateful that Egypt is not a country with a vast military organization like Syria, for in that case we should be faced with a much more formidable enemy. In Egypt soldiers do not count for much. President Sadat's regime has recently had to contend with some snubs by Russia and warnings that the Egyptian army should not indulge in any heroics against Israel for fear of the consequences. Coming to add to the pressures against Sadat on the home front, where his continuous empty threats against Israel have drawn much criticism, the Egyptian President's position has become shaky — too shaky perhaps to make him willing to agree to the exchange of prisoners, even to oblige Syria, his partner in the tripartite union. If we have to wait for his exchange until Sadat's position becomes more secure once more, then all the prisoners concerned may have a long wait.

Mirages sold to Abu Dhabi

PARIS (Reuters). — France has sold 12 Mirage V fighter-bombers to the gulf state of Abu Dhabi, informed sources said here on Thursday. The sale of the jets — each estimated to cost about $1,250,000 — followed tough competition between France, Britain, the U.S. and the Soviet Union, the sources said.

Ribicoff says Nixon could change on Israel

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Senator Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut, who made the nominating speech for George McGovern at the Democratic convention, said in an Israel TV interview on Friday night that Israel appeared to be making a "great hero" of President Nixon, although it was not until December 1971 that Mr. Nixon's record became favourable to Israel.

In a reference to the "Rogers Plan," Mr. Ribicoff said the Secretary of State could not be dissociated from the President's policies. He also intimated that Mr. Nixon, after the elections in November, might well make a deal with the Russians and impose a settlement on the Middle East. Interviewed by Haim Yavin, Sen. Ribicoff said Mr. McGovern had made his position on Israel clear during the past year, and that this was "the best position for U.S.-Israel relations." He said there was no doubt that Sen. McGovern would stand by his promises if elected.

Israel Ambassador Yitzhak Rabin had held a meeting with Mr. McGovern in his (Ribicoff's) flat, the senator said, and the discussion had been "constructive." Senator Ribicoff expressed his resentment of what he called the "attempts to make the American Jews into political pawns" (See Jewish Democrats, page 3).
Our wire services add:
On Friday, the first official of a large trade union, Mr. Kenneth Lyons, president of the National Association of Government Employees, announced his support for the re-election of President Nixon. Mr. Lyons' organization claims 200,000 members — and it was a first trade union group which announced its defection from the Democratic Party in this year's election.

Meanwhile, obviously weary from the 18-month struggle for the nomination, Senator McGovern flew to Washington yesterday for a week-end rest at his Japanese-style home instead of returning to his home state of South Dakota. Former U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally said on Friday he will not support Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern but rather will work to elect Democrats in President Nixon's re-election drive. The man who until two months ago was the only Democrat in Mr. Nixon's cabinet accused Sen. McGovern of sabotaging the President's Vietnam peace efforts and sharply criticized other McGovern positions as "radical in character."

Mr. Connally's criticism of Senator McGovern, made at a press conference arranged by the White House in the garden of the President's Spanish-style home in San Clemente, was the opening shot by the Republican side of what is expected to be a bitter, no-punches-pulled election campaign. Haifa woman shot dead by deserted husband

By YA'ACOV ARDON
Jerusalem Post Reporter

KIRYAT TIVON. — A 36-year-old Haifa woman, Sara Shmulevitz, was shot dead here after midnight on Friday in a wild shootout involving herself, her deserted husband and a man friend. Police said 27 shots were fired in the incident. Both the husband, Shmuel 42, and her friend, Alexander Hary, 52, were wounded. According to the police, Shmulevitz, an army captain, was alerted on Friday night by a private detective he had hired that his wife was spending the night here in the company of another man. He hired a taxi, arrived in the town after midnight, and asked a resident for the address of the home. When he found it, he dismissed the cab and rang the bell. Mr. Hary asked the caller what he wanted. "I want to talk to my wife. Our son has had an accident and needs her instantly," the husband said. Hary replied she was not in the house, but he would inform her if she called next morning. "I don't believe you," Shmulevitz shouted and reportedly began to fire his Uzl gun at the lock and broke into the house. Hary fired at him with a revolver which the police say is unloaded and hit the assailant in the foot while he himself was struck in the arm when Shmulevitz shot back at him. Meanwhile Mrs. Shmulevitz, hearing the shooting, ran out into the courtyard, pursued by her husband. "Don't move," he shouted at her. When she did not stop, he fired, wounding her fatally. He left her lying there and went to the telephone to call the police. When he got no connection, he ran out to neighbours who called the police and an ambulance. The police, alerted by other residents, were quickly on the scene. A doctor pronounced Sara Shmulevitz dead from bullet wounds. Deputy Commander Sgair Nitzav Haim Fraenkel and Inspector Haim Melach, who opened an investigation, had Hary taken to hospital where he was operated on and declared out of danger. In the morning a mobile police laboratory arrived from Tel Aviv and the events of the night were reconstructed with the help of the suspect. According to the police, the

Greeks seize 12 planning kidnappings

ATHENS. — In a security swoop, the Greek authorities have arrested 12 people including four West German students and said they planned to kidnap prominent Greeks and John F. Kennedy Jr. Greek information official Byron Stamatopoulos said the Germans were arrested in Athens on July 7. They belonged to an anarchist organization which cooperated with a Greek underground group that had claimed responsibility for bomb explosions in the capital, he said. Police said one of the suspects told them the gangs planned to kidnap the 11-year-old son of the late President Kennedy, as well as other persons. One gang was composed of the four West Germans identified by authorities as members of the 20th October Movement while the second gang was composed entirely of Greeks inspired by ideas of what police called the "new left." Trevino wins British Open

MURFIELD, Scotland (Reuter). — Defending champion Lee Trevino of the U.S. retained his British Open golf title here yesterday in one of the most tinging finishes in the 100 years' history of the famed event.

Trevino held off a storming do-or-die attempt by big blond Jack Nicklaus, who started the last round six strokes behind his fellow American.

There was only one shot between them at the finish. Trevino, round in a par 71, totalling 278 to win by the narrowest possible margin from Nicklaus, who equaled the course record with a five-under par 69.

As Nicklaus' storming effort began to fade a little in the closing stages, Trevino won a duel with Britain's Tony Jacklin, who was only one stroke behind him.

Algerian paper attacks M.E. political solution

ALGIERS. — The resumption of the U.N. Middle East peace mission of Dr. Gunnar Jarring, if accepted by the Arab countries, would be a serious strategic mistake, the Algerian newspaper "El-Moudjahid" said yesterday.

The search for a political solution works "only to the detriment of the Arab countries since it gives the Tel Aviv leaders time to fortify their military and para-military positions," the paper said in an editorial.

"The prolongation of the state of neither war nor peace in the Middle East also works towards economic deterioration in the Arab countries and generates political instability," it added.

The resumption of the Jarring mission was announced by the U.N. last Monday.

In Washington, U.S. officials said they are puzzled as to what made Dr. Jarring decide to reactivate his deadlocked mission.

State Department officials said they see no change in the position of either Egypt or Israel, nor are there any signs that a change is forthcoming.

There was speculation in Washington that U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim may wish to get the mission going again and then threaten its abandonment in an effort to pressure Egypt and Israel to make concessions.

"Shock treatment in diplomacy sometimes has an effect," one diplomat said not very hopefully.

Will Bobby play chess today?

REYKJAVIK. — Bobby Fischer's lawyers were back yesterday asking for a reversal of a decision to penalize Fischer for missing the second game of the world chess championship.

A special appeals committee made a "final and irrevocable" decision ruling on Friday to uphold referee Lothar Schmid's award of Thursday's game to Boris Spassky, the world champion from Russia.

Fischer sulked in his hotel room Thursday as his clock ran out. Afterward he protested his loss in an angry letter and said he would play no more unless the point was erased.

The deadlock seemed total yesterday, but Fischer's attorneys and his second, the Rev. William Lombardy, were trying to find a way out.

One official connected with the International Chess Federation (Fide) said he thought it was "impossible" to take the point away from Spassky.

Fischer boycotted game No. 2 because, he said, the noise from hidden movie cameras created "outrageous" playing conditions.

But on Friday an engineer tested the noise level of the cameras and found absolutely no difference in the sound of the empty hall with or without the cameras running.

One of Fischer's lawyers, Paul Marshall, said the referees were discussing whether or not to reopen the case.

Asked if Fischer planned to pack up and go home, Mr. Marshall said, "No. Otherwise I wouldn't be here." He had arrived from New York yesterday morning.

Fischer aides have suggested that the game due to start today be the second game and that the question of the forfeit be taken up by Fide. If necessary, they argued, a forfeited game could be added to the score at the end of the series.

But Fide sources said this was out of the question — for one thing the Russians would never agree to it. Fischer would have to go into the match today two games down or not at all, they said.

Spassky meanwhile had gone salmon fishing to get away from it all.

Fischer, as usual, was inaccessible. He was closeted in his hotel, presumably in quiet observance of the Sabbath he recognizes from sundown Friday to sundown Saturday as a member of a Christian Adventist sect.

One international grand master who believed Fischer would sabotage the match called Fischer's conduct "a disguised form of suicide."

The match organizers have asked former British champion Harry Golombek, the Fide official here most involved in the dispute, to contact federation president Dr. Max Euwe and ask him to come to Iceland to try to sort out the problems.

But Mr. Golombek said he doubted if Dr. Euwe would come and saw little reason for him to do.

"I think the chances of Fischer continuing with the match are 100 to 1 against," Mr. Golombek said. "But one never knows with Bobby. He just may turn up."

Arsonists set fire to Hamburg stores

HAMBURG (AP). — Arsonists set four large department stores on fire in this north German seaport city early yesterday in what police said was probably the work of an anarchist gang. Automatic extinguishers and smoke alarms reacted to the fires before they could do much damage, police said.

Mr. Vuaux told the three-man civilian court he assumed the letters, mostly addressed in Arabic and bearing Egyptian stamps, were to Jewish friends of Gervais. He said he knew Jews lived in Egypt. He also denied receiving any money in advance from Gervais.

Three letters, produced in court yesterday, allegedly found on Vuaux at the time of his arrest last February, were addressed to former French Ambassador Francois Vuaux, former Reuter bureau chief John Chadwick, and Morris Gindy of United Press International, the court was told.

Mr. Vuaux testified Gervais asked him to take photographs of buildings which had antennas on their roofs. But he said that he did not know how to use a camera and did not bring one with him.

Yet to testify in Egypt's first espionage trial involving foreigners and open to the press since 1965 was Belgium businessman Jacques Pierre Harrant, 41.

Both were arrested in February and have been held since. The indictment charges them with agreeing to gather economic and political information for Israeli agents in return for money paid to them in advance, and distributing anti-government leaflets. Both pleaded innocent.

Egypt demands life for two 'Israel spies'

CAIRO (AP). — Egypt demanded life prison sentences yesterday for a French freelance journalist and a Belgian businessman accused of spying for Israel and distributing anti-government leaflets during wartime.

However, Frenchman Jean Marc Vuaux, 29, the first defendant to testify, denied gathering information for a Jew he identified only as Gervais, whom he met in France, and said he did not know the contents of 14 letters he was asked to mail.

More than 100 strikes B52s smash at Quang Tri

SAIGON. — U.S. B52 bombers, America's most powerful warplanes, killed nearly 300 North Vietnamese troops and smashed their equipment in massive strikes on two sides of Quang Tri City, the U.S. command announced in a communique yesterday.

The big bombers flew more than 100 strikes across South Vietnam from noon Friday until noon yesterday, unleashing more than 2,500 tons of explosives on North Vietnamese troop concentrations in all four military regions of South Vietnam.

Two-thirds of the strikes were concentrated in the northernmost sector that includes Quang Tri and Thua Thien provinces, South Vietnam's two northernmost provinces below the Demilitarized Zone. Most of the B52 raids were in support of a 20,000-man South Vietnamese counter-offensive in Quang Tri province, which fell to the North Vietnamese on May 1.

The U.S. command said that

South Vietnamese paratroopers searching one area 13 kms. south of Quang Tri City, where the B52s had hit, found 60 destroyed North Vietnamese bunkers containing approximately 250 Communist troops dead and their equipment. The B52s also destroyed two 37mm anti-aircraft guns, one 85mm gun, and two trucks in the same target area, the command said.

It was one of the most successful raids of the war claimed by the U.S. command.

Meanwhile, military sources said that a South Vietnamese paratrooper battalion had moved to within 700 yards east of the Quang Tri Citadel. They said this was the closest unit to the city limits.

The number of North Vietnamese holding on in Quang Tri is believed to be much greater than was first thought, sources said.

Military sources expect that Hanoi is preparing for a major showdown round the city in which they hope to inflict heavy casualties on the south's two elite reserve formations, the marines and the airborne troops.

Yesterday the Vietcong claimed that more than 200 South Vietnamese prisoners of war were killed by American bombing attacks in Kontum province on July 5 and 6.

The Vietcong's Liberation Radio said most of the prisoners had been wounded and "left behind" during ground fighting in the Kontum area on July 2 to 4. After their capture, the Vietnamese language broadcast said, the 200 had been treated for their wounds and then moved to hill 616, three kilometers north of Loc Mal.

On July 5 and 6, the broadcast continued, U.S. B52 bombers "dropped tons of anti-personal bombs" on hill 616, killing all of the more than 200 prisoners. A spokesman for the U.S. Command said he had no such report.

Bhutto announces Seato withdrawal

ISLAMABAD (Reuter). — President Bhutto announced to Parliament here that he has taken Pakistan out of the South East Asian Treaty Organization (Seato), Reuter reported yesterday.

In London a British Foreign Office spokesman declined comment pending receipt of an official report, but British officials privately expressed regret at Pakistan's departure from the Seato defence alliance to which the British Government attaches great importance.

However, it was not clear whether Mr. Bhutto was stating a fact or an intention, political observers said in Islamabad.

The President's statement, Reuter said, came after Khan Abdul Wali Khan, leader of the pro-Mohammed National Awami Party, had demanded that Pakistan pull out of both Seato and the Central Treaty Organization (Cento).

President Bhutto, winding up a five day debate on the recent agreement reached with India, at Simla, said he had already taken Pakistan out of Seato but Pakistan had reactivated its membership of Cento.

Pakistan, along with France, has not taken an active military role in the eight-nation Seato pact for some time, and both nations were absent when the organization's 17th council meeting was held in Canberra last month.

The six active members of the organization, founded in 1954 for mutual defence against communist threats, are the United States, Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Thailand and the Philippines.

President Bhutto said that by re-activating Pakistan's membership of Cento, which links Pakistan with Britain, Turkey and Iran, he had placed the sponsors of the pact under a commitment to fulfil their obligations towards his country.

If they did not do so, Pakistan would walk out of Cento too, President Bhutto added.

After Mr. Bhutto spoke, Parliament ratified by acclamation the Simla agreement, in which India and Pakistan are pledged to end 25 years of bitterness, to give up territory captured in their war last December, to restore normal communications and outlaw the use of force to settle disputes.

Yesterday President Bhutto later began a tour of Sind province where at least 14 people have died in week-long language conflict. Pakistan Radio said that President Bhutto may climax his visit by announcing details of a possible compromise agreement between the Hindi and Urdu speaking inhabitants. Violence in the province erupted a week ago after the provincial assembly voted to make Hindi the only official language against the wishes of thousands of Urdu-speakers.

W. German starts talks in Peking

PEKING (Reuter). — Former West German Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder began his first session of talks with Chinese leaders yesterday after arriving in Peking at the start of a 10-day visit.

Dr. Schroeder, the first West German politician to come here since the Peoples' Republic was founded in 1949, went to Peking's Ok Legation quarter for talks with China's German-speaking Vice-Foreign Minister, Chiao Kuan-hua.

China's Assistant Foreign Minister Chang Wen Chin, an expert on West European affairs, was also at the session.

Dr. Schroeder is here at the invitation of the Chinese People's Institute of Foreign Affairs and not the Foreign Ministry.

Institute officials were to hold a banquet for Dr. Schroeder last night in Peking's Great Hall of the People. Dr. Schroeder evaded a reporter's question as to whether he would be representing the West German Government in his talks. He said merely that he was chairman of the Sub-Committee on Foreign Affairs and that other points would be made clear at a press conference later.

The East German embassy in Peking has taken a close interest in Dr. Schroeder's visit, and local leave for East German diplomats has been cancelled, according to diplomatic sources here.

In acceptance speech McGovern would quit Vietnam, back Israel

By RONALD CLARKE
 MIAMI BEACH (Reuter). — SENATOR George McGovern promised a cheering Democratic Party convention on Friday that if elected President, he would bring every American soldier and prisoner home from Vietnam, defend Israel and restore the government to the people.

The Democratic Presidential candidate was given a rapturous reception when he appeared on the convention podium to make a televised speech accepting his party's nomination — but much of the U.S. must have long been in bed. A stream of speakers who had earlier extolled the virtues of eight vice-presidential candidates prevented Sen. McGovern from starting his speech until 2.45 a.m.

But the approaching dawn did not dampen the spirits of the people in the Convention hall as Sen. McGovern declared:

"Within 90 days of my inauguration (as President) every American soldier and every American prisoner will be out of the jungle and out of their cells and back home in America where they belong."

Sen. McGovern said that during four Administrations involving both Republican and Democratic parties, a terrible war had been carried behind closed doors. "I want those doors opened, and I want that war closed," he declared as party delegates in the packed hall jumped on to their seats and clapped and cheered.

up to a grand climax in its fourth and final session with rousing speeches by Senator Edward Kennedy — given a standing, shouting welcome by the 3,000-plus delegates — and Sen. Thomas Eagleton, overwhelmingly approved as Sen. McGovern's choice for the Vice-Presidency.

Sen. Kennedy, who had been McGovern's first choice, hailed the presidential candidate as "a new wind rising over the plains of South Dakota (the Senator's home state) and spreading across the country."

Sen. Kennedy had flown from Hyannisport, Massachusetts, on the final day of the convention to join other party leaders — including Senators Hubert Humphrey and Edmund Muskie and other defeated presidential candidates — in a public display of unity.

As a band played "The gang's all here" delegates cheered themselves hoarse, snake-danced in the aisles and stamped their feet in a thunderous ovation.

Sen. Eagleton, a handsome labour lawyer from Missouri, is expected to try to strengthen Sen. McGovern's pro relations with some of the big trade union bosses and help win him support in the South.

The attempt appeared largely unsuccessful.

Some of the delegates said that they had been elected as McGovern supporters, but were now gravely concerned about the Senator's "insensitivity" to issues which concern the six million American Jews.

Only counts delegates

One delegate said that just as the Black caucus could not accept a Wallace supporter holding a top post on the staff of their party's candidate, Jews could not accept a pro-Arab member on the McGovern staff.

The South Dakota Senator's assistant, Sarah Czuzman, replied to the criticism by saying that Stearns had no influence on policy decisions in the McGovern campaign. "He has zero input on issues," she said, adding that he was only a "delegate courier."

Soviet economic needs may push two Europes together

By NEAL ACHERSON
 FROM January next year, no East European country will be able to make trade agreements directly with an EEC nation. In theory, the EEC Commission at Brussels will negotiate an agreement with Hungary or Poland as if it were the Trade Ministry of a united West European nation.

Are the two halves of Europe really drawing closer? Or are their economies, at least, moving further apart? In Moscow last week, Comecon, the East European economic bloc, held its own summit. Communist sources said little more than that the conference reached a new agreement on progress towards integration. But there can be no doubt that it also looked towards the European Economic Community's summit this autumn and tried to work out its own policy towards the great trading fortress of 10 nations arising in the West.

This is a disarming prospect for the smaller Comecon members. They fear that the Commission will enforce a strict protectionist policy, and make it harder to earn the hard currency through exports which they so badly need.

But there are signs that the fatal First of January may produce some anti-climax. Existing trade agreements will be allowed to run their course. The Commission, fearing above all a flat defiance from France which values its sovereignty in dealing with Eastern Europe, may even permit bilateral trade agreements to be renewed, with a token clause saluting the Commission's rights.

But another Comecon organ, the International Investment Bank, has been achieving bigger things. It finances projects in the joint interests of all members, so far largely in the field of improving transport. So far the Soviet Union has not asked for IIB funds, and Czechoslovakia has been the biggest borrower. But the Russians will soon apply. They want IIB help to exploit the gigantic iron ore deposits known as "the Kursk Magnetic Anomaly," to become the main supply for all Comecon industry.

The East Europeans see the Commission's policy as a form of political pressure, edging them towards decentralized market economies without a State foreign trade monopoly. The Commission would not interfere if, say, a Rumanian textile mill runs its own deal with a London firm of shirtmakers. It is the massive treaty specifying all exchanges from collars to locomotives, signed between an Eastern and a Western country, that the Commission disapproves of. But, with the exception of Hungary, Eastern Europe's movement towards market economies in which each enterprise does its own business has slackened off. Since Czechoslovakia, there has been fear that a liberalized economy may produce uncontrollable political results.

Slow development

This is the situation which the industrialized nations of Eastern Europe want to change. One hope is the "co-production" system, by which Western firms use cheaper Eastern labour and materials to help Eastern factories to produce goods for re-sale within the Common Market. But this scheme, though 10 years old, has been inexplicably slow to develop.

Comecon itself is making slow progress towards integration. So far, there is no joint currency or trade policy, but the International Bank for Economic Cooperation (IBEC) has begun enormously to expand its hard-currency capital through bank loans from the West.

IBEC finances multilateral trade within Comecon, although the bloc still does most of its trading by old-fashioned bilateral barter deals, leaving only less important goods like shoes and some textiles to be purchased for hard cash in the Western style.

And here there emerges the central problem of Comecon, which also affects the entire developed world. It is the anomaly of the Soviet economy itself. The Soviet Union is both vast and apparently self-sufficient. Like the United States it only exports about 4 per cent of its production (most Comecon members export between a fifth and a third). But this is deceptive. The Soviet Union's needs and natural resources are too big for its own technology and human resources. Slowly there is emerging an unofficial world consortium to develop the natural wealth of the Soviet Union.

Setting a date

He underscored his contention that the war could be ended and American prisoners released by setting a date for the complete withdrawal of troops from Vietnam.

The U.S., he said, should resolve that "never again will we shed the precious young blood of this nation to prop up a corrupt military dictatorship abroad."

In the prepared text of his speech, McGovern had referred only to "perpetuating an unresponsible military abroad."

But he promised that the U.S. would bring its defence alert and fully sufficient to meet any danger. "We will do that not only for ourselves, but for those who deserve and need the shield of our strength — our old allies in Europe, and elsewhere, including the people of Israel, who will always have our help to hold their promised land," he said.

The theme of Sen. McGovern's speech was "let us protect ourselves abroad and perfect ourselves at home." The convention steadily built

Murmuring among Jewish Democrats

By HANAN SHEER
 Jerusalem Post Reporter
 MIAMI BEACH — Jewish delegates to the Democratic convention have expressed grave concern over the presence of a man, identified as "pro-Arab" in the number three position on the staff of presidential nominee Senator George McGovern.

One delegate predicted that Rick Stearns, 27-year-old head of the McGovern delegate-gathering operation in non-primary states, would cost the Democratic candidate "a minimum of 30 per cent" of the Jewish vote in the November general election.

The statements came at a somewhat stormy caucus of Jewish delegates at a Miami Beach hotel on Thursday afternoon. The meeting had been called by the McGovern organization in the hope of enlisting Jewish supporters of other Democrats behind their candidate.

The attempt appeared largely unsuccessful.

Some of the delegates said that they had been elected as McGovern supporters, but were now gravely concerned about the Senator's "insensitivity" to issues which concern the six million American Jews.

Only counts delegates

One delegate said that just as the Black caucus could not accept a Wallace supporter holding a top post on the staff of their party's candidate, Jews could not accept a pro-Arab member on the McGovern staff.

The South Dakota Senator's assistant, Sarah Czuzman, replied to the criticism by saying that Stearns had no influence on policy decisions in the McGovern campaign. "He has zero input on issues," she said, adding that he was only a "delegate courier."

Senator Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut, who placed McGovern's

name in nomination before the 1968 and 1972 conventions, "condemned" the supporters of Senator Humphrey for what he called a "smear campaign" on Jewish issues in the California primary last month. President Nixon is already starting to attack McGovern with these same unfounded charges. Mr. Ribicoff said. The Connecticut Senator disclaimed that Nixon became sensitive to Jewish feelings and to Israel only three years after the start of his administration, during Mrs. Meir's visit to Washington in December, 1971.

David Luchins, Chairman of the Jewish Youth for Humphrey, said that he and other Jews in the Humphrey campaign could not support McGovern at this time. Luchins, who is orthodox, also objected to the fact that many party caucuses were held on the Sabbath. "So go to Israel," shouted one middle-aged woman, a McGovern supporter.

Soldiers limited to five children

JAKARTA (Reuter). — President Suharto has banned soldiers from having more than five children, as part of the Government's birth control programme.

The President told a meeting of military wives on Friday that the ban was part of the family planning scheme which the Government had vowed would succeed.

Indonesia has a population of about 117 million.

NO WATER for the POOR

I stopped thinking the bottled drinks a strange luxury when we passed the dirty, sluggish little stream that is the reason for the village's existence and waters its straggly fields. Cows stamp around in it, churning up the mud. Further up, women were washing clothes in the water. Where did the drinking water come from? It's all right, said the driver of our jeep, they dig a hole at the side of the stream and tap it from the bottom. Some of the people from the village work in the town, or at least rest sleeping space to others who work there. Our driver ordinarily worked at a hotel. Did he live in the village? He shrugged. "No. Too dirty."

Just past the village the bumpy road deep in powdery dust changed into a smooth tarred surface. We came to a decorative brick wall and a big sign announcing that this was a motel. "Good water. Showers. Washing machines." There were a few big cars and trailers still left though it was the end of the season. Washing machines. I asked where they got the water. From the town, he replied. Couldn't it be better, a couple of hundred metres further, to the village? The boy shrugged again and said, "Who'd pay for it?"

Who indeed? Mexico is a poor country with limited natural resources. Oil was nationalized. A number of years ago, but it does not flow as generously as Middle Eastern oil. Three-quarters of the country is dry and arid. Industry is still in an early stage. Tourism is an important source of income and the clean water for the motel is a business investment, not a favour for foreigners.

Poverty and stagnation have bitten deep into the bones of most of the population, but after 60 years of revolution — the name of the majority party, P.R.I. signifies "Party of Institutionalized Revolution" — there is a growing feeling that it is time to do something about it. The comparative wealth of the tourists who like to poke around picturesque villages, and of the rich Mexicans themselves, probably does not make it any easier to be poor. There are too many people and too few houses.

The boy asked us if we could not find him a job in the city. If he had a job he might, whatever his colour, have a chance of one of the well-designed public housing units. Cost is $10,000-12,000, but the first down payment is only about $2,000. The old tenements in the city have no water laid on, any more than the make-shift huts that cover the hills outside the city.

like uniform, banners demanding "More taxes, yes — but not from the poor." There were many banners demanding progress, and many saying "Remember the Chicago Martyrs" who were killed in the first May Day procession. There were many Mexican flags but even more red and black ones, the strike flag, I learnt. Strikes were not always permitted in the past.

This parade is not organized at a session of the top party echelon: the people want to go to demonstrate their existence, and the party leaders are happy to appear on the platform and applaud.

There was no police in evidence. They are there, I was told, in case of an emergency but stay out of sight. Somebody said, "Don't worry. There are plenty of secret agents." Even as a visitor attached to the President's travel party I was to hear this phrase repeated in many forms. As a matter of fact a Mexican crowd, even marching, seems friendly and relaxed by comparison with New Yorkers just trying to get into the subway. They just don't shove, and they will let you go through if you want to get to the other side, especially women, and I saw security officers move children away with an affectionate pat.

As they marched, half the people were talking and laughing, with groups of chuckling old men digging each other in the ribs as they rolled along. But I thought it would not take a great deal to turn the cheerful marchers into a terrible army with banners.

This, really, is what Comecon financial integration is about. Comecon members already do half their trade with the Soviet Union. Now they must invest in exploiting Soviet raw materials, on which both their own economies and the Soviet economy depend. The petroleum and iron and copper and gas are there in the ground, in quantities whose noughts reel off to the horizon. But the Russians cannot get them out fast enough to keep pace with their own needs and those of Eastern Europe.

And this, too, is what most East-West trade is about. The West German pipes will help to bring Soviet gas to the outside world. The Japanese are building harbours and investigating Siberian copper. The French and Germans are helping with the great lorry factory on the Kama River, a necessary part of the infrastructure. One of the biggest consortia ever formed is being evolved by the Americans and the Japanese to exploit the oil in the Tyumen basin in western Siberia, at a cost of perhaps $3,000 million.

The age of Russian self-sufficiency is over. From now on, the Soviet Union must be involved with the whole industrialized world if it is to go on making progress. (Ofus)

THERE is a crumbling village not far from the charming and newly smart resort of Puerto Barrios. In the village square an empty house has been made a reception and gallery, but there was next to nothing to buy in the village shop when I glanced in. Soda-pop and sugar and a pile of matches and tins of oil. The very little boys scamper naked and acquire a pretty brown tan all over; they can expect to get their first rudimentary garment at three or four years old. There were no little girls on the street; perhaps they have to stay home for modesty's sake.

Permanent majority

The revolutionary government has been in office in Mexico since 1910. Something like Israel's Labour Party in character, it controls as sure majority and its candidate will obtain the presidency and pick his government, and even his successor. Only once, of course. One of Mexico's most cherished political principles is that after a president has served out his six-year term, he becomes a non-person, excluded from all major political positions. There have been too many dictators in Latin America and this is the safeguard. As a by-product it makes for young presidents and governments. Even the members of parliament must go after their three-year term is over.

I chanced to see the May Day parade in the city of Guadalajara, capital of the south central state of Jalisco. At over a million inhabitants it is the third largest town in Mexico, but still with the flavour of an easygoing provincial place. The parade was no joke. It went on, five deep, sometimes ten deep, 15 deep, for almost three hours. Nobody walks in step — Mexican army service is only performed Sundays, for one year.

It is hard to believe that any government in power, whatever its colour, is perfectly at ease while the entire people is on the march. All the stalwarts were there. Old, grey-haired women, immensely proud of their emancipation and their share in the revolution. Smart groups of men in trim boilersuits, brass bands, girls from factories in something like uniform, banners demanding "More taxes, yes — but not from the poor." There were many banners demanding progress, and many saying "Remember the Chicago Martyrs" who were killed in the first May Day procession. There were many Mexican flags but even more red and black ones, the strike flag, I learnt. Strikes were not always permitted in the past.

Futures in currency

By J. VOET
Jerusalem Post Economic Correspondent

THE unsettled conditions in world currency markets has induced Chicago bankers and foreign currency dealers to establish the International Monetary Market of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, Inc. In doing this they followed the advice of two prominent professors of economics — Milton Friedman of Chicago and Paul Samuelson of the M.I.T.

Wider fluctuations of exchange rates will now be the order of the day, Professor Friedman wrote in a paper for the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. The official exchange rates will be less rigid. They will be changed in response to much less pressure, and transitional floats will probably be resorted to, as the chief device from shifting from one level to another. Transitional floats have now become respectable. (This was written months before the recent sterling float.)

These changes, Professor Friedman concluded, create a major need for a broad, widely-based, active and resilient futures market. The existing futures markets in London, Zurich and New York lack the breadth, depth and resilience that is needed, he felt.

FUTURES ARE STABILIZING
This view was supported by Professor Samuelson, who recently pointed out that contrary to widespread opinion trade in futures tends to have a stabilizing effect.

Encouraged by these statements, the initiators of the International Monetary Market have established "contracts" for seven currencies. One can buy and sell the equivalent of $50,000 or DMS500,000 or SFr500,000 or Y25m. etc. for future delivery after 90 days, at the price of the day, plus or minus. The premium involved is, of course, established from day to day by supply and demand. If many people want to sell sterling for delivery in October and few are inclined to buy the negative spread — the discount from today's rate — will be relatively large. If many people want to buy German Marks or Japanese Yen but few are ready to deliver those currencies, 90 days hence, the premium above today's spot rate will be fairly high.

Elaborate rules have been established specifying the buyer's and the seller's duties, the way long and short contracts are matched, how delivery has to be effected, to whom and how payments have to be made. The buying or selling of the currencies is a pure exchange rate speculation, no interest being calculated. The Continental Illinois National Bank will monitor the delivery procedure, and when the transaction is completed, it will notify the International Money Market Clearing House.

The International Money Market is already operating for some time, though no information has reached us about its turnover and the premiums that are in force.

Israel citizens cannot of course enter this futures market, because of foreign currency controls. But banks may use the facilities now being developed in Chicago at least for part of their foreign reserves. The Bank of Israel itself with so many currencies coming to it from all countries of the world and having to pay out in different currencies, may find in the International Monetary Market a welcome medium to balance its position in the foreign currency sphere without taking too many risks.

RELIGIOUS IMMIGRANTS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — Mr. R. Well offers more truth than perhaps he realizes in his letter, "Motivation for Immigration" (July 7).

With my wife and four children, I came here to settle after 1967. I am one of those whom Mr. Well speaks, who "sought stronger Jewish identification and fulfillment of their Jewish life." But although my love for this land and its people is unbounded, I feel now, for the first time, pangs of doubt as to whether I made the right decision in coming.

As the tendency has increased to think more of self and of the rights of the individual, than of one's duty to the people of Israel and its unity, so have my misgivings increased.

Today, this essentially non-Jewish view of society has produced serious efforts to force legislation for civil marriage through the Knesset. If it succeeds, certain disruption of our people will follow; and in this event we are by no means alone among our friends in wondering whether we would not be wiser to return to the land of our origin.

PRaise FOR A.A.C.I.

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — I am not one given to writing letters but, for once, I am going to give credit where credit is due — to the Association of American and Canadians in Israel.

From the first occasion I had to meet a volunteer representative at the Aliyada Expo 1971, to the last week of June, 1972, when I entered my home, this organization has been right alongside of me to help in countless ways. At times I felt, in my dealings with other offices, that bureaucracy would get the better of me, but there was always some encouragement that the staff and volunteers were eager to give me.

My son, who had all the problems of an immigrant, has been at one of the finest Youth Aliya villages in the country and feels completely accepted by his peers. I have an interesting job which was secured through the efforts of the counselling staff of the Tel Aviv Regional Office of A.A.C.I. I have found wonderful friends both in and out of A.A.C.I. of which I am now an active member.

I think this is a fitting time for me to write this letter because, without all this help and encouragement, I would not be celebrating — at the end of July — my first anniversary in Israel.

BALLET IN JERUSALEM

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — Unlike your ballet critic and the excessively polite audience which witnessed the performance of the London Festival Ballet at the Elayzah Ha'ozma last Sunday night, I have grown weary of putting up with amateur nights, while at the same time paying astronomical ticket prices.

Ballet is not like the movies, and it is quite unreasonable to advertise a performance at nine o'clock in the evening, and then, later, almost surreptitiously, advertise a second performance to begin at six o'clock the same evening, as it must be tiring for a company unused to such things to put on two shows a night.

Moreover, it was exceedingly difficult to see what was going on in the performances of "Scheherazade" and "Prince Igor" due to an execrable dirty red glow on the stage which passed for lighting. To compound matters, only one spotlight was working that night at Elayzah Ha'ozma, so that during the performance of "Prince Igor" the light would be on the main dancer as a mere spectator, while the action was taking place centre stage.

People paid London prices for the London Festival Ballet and, while the company itself is to be thanked for making the trip, I can only hope that, in the future, companies from abroad demand from their Israeli impresarios schedules to which they are accustomed and conditions in the theatre or hall which 'match their own artistic standards.

LIFTS TO SOLDIERS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — We were happy to read that the Army had started to run buses to collect soldiers at special points on Fridays and Sundays. This is, of course, a great step forward, but is no solution for all problems, since these buses do not run all over Israel, nor every day of the week. Our organization believes that the only way to solve the problem is to make all car owners aware of it.

Our organization has printed a large number of car stickers with the following slogans: "Stop for the soldier on the road," "Get in, soldiers, let's drive off," and "Give lifts to soldiers." We have also printed posters for public display calling on drivers not to ignore soldiers on the roads.

We appeal to all those who are willing to help us personally in this educational campaign to contact us at F.O.B. Box 100, HELI MERITZ, Transport Organization for the Soldier on the Road, Tel Aviv, July 3.

SECURITY ON AIR FRANCE

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — It took Mr. Pierre Cot, Director General of Air France, almost a month to send you his reply of my article of June 12 on the slapdash security methods which his company applied on its Tel Aviv flights until it was jolted out of its complacency by the Lod massacre. Mr. Cot obviously considered he was obliged to answer the serious charges which I made against Air France. But in order not to give further publicity to the loopholes in Air France's security set-up, he preferred to delay his answer until Lod was off the front pages of the world's press. Unfortunately, Mr. Cot's timing has not been so brilliant after all, as now Air France has found itself in the dock with the only survivor of the Japanese terrorist trio.

Mr. Cot writes: "The security measures taken by Air France have never been in any way inferior to those applied by all foreign airlines operating flights to Tel Aviv." I don't know how often Mr. Cot visits Orly Airport. Had he done so earlier, he would have been able to see, like any fare-paying traveller, that for almost two years, El Al has been systematically searching the baggage of its passengers at Orly. El Al was the only airline to adopt this procedure before the tragedy at Lod. Air France took the attitude that baggage searches irritated passengers and that anyhow the French airline was protected from hijackers and terrorists by some sort of implicit understanding with Israel's enemies. Naturally, other world airlines operating out of Paris considered that what was good enough for Air France was good enough for them. But if Air France had followed El Al's example in conducting baggage searches on all flights, foreign airlines would have had to follow suit.

All this makes nonsense of Mr. Cot's claim that a special instruction issued by Air France on May 11 called for intensified "supervisory measures." Whatever these measures were, they did not involve the examination of baggage. Had this been done, nobody would have died at Lod.

Mr. Cot says that hand baggage continued to be inspected after Air France did away with identifying cargo compartment baggage earlier this year. A number of readers of this newspaper have written to me reporting that they were appalled by the absence of any such checks at Orly — even after the tragedy at Lod.

Mr. Cot takes to task Air France captains who have rebelled against the inadequacy of the company's security precautions. Incidentally, Mr. Cot ought to read The Jerusalem Post more carefully. I reported that not just one, but five Air France captains refused to take off for Tel Aviv in May because the company refused to adopt a serious system of luggage searches. Mr. Cot knows better than any of us that management-pilot relations in his company are probably the worst in all the international airlines. But this does not justify a Director General making a public attack on his staff in a foreign newspaper.

Mr. Cot accuses me of not checking my facts. I went to great pains to do precisely this. If Air France's Director General would himself check how security-conscious they are in the warehouse where transit baggage is handled at Orly I'm afraid he will have quite a shock.

Babies should be taught to swim

One-month-old boy learns to swim with help of adult. First step is to overcome fear of water.

By PAUL ALMASY

Like mammals but the mother key swim naturally from birth, or man and monkey, it is by no means instinctive not to sink in water. Deaths by drowning are common everywhere. In the United States alone, about 7,000 children under four drown each year.

One solution is particularly effective — teaching children to swim while they are still babies. Most large towns in Florida and California already run lessons for babies and infants. The idea has spread to Europe, where in several countries special courses are now arranged for children from seven to 12 months.

The first step is to eradicate the child's fear of the water. Next, he is taught to float. Once he can do this naturally and without fear, the teacher can move on to breathing, arm and leg movements. Before long, the child grasps the technique and can propel himself through the water.

Babies still too young to talk are taught to swim by imitation. "The method is very simple," says Catherine Grojean, mistress at the municipal pool in Rouen, France. "I go into the water with the child in my arms. First I raise my head a little above the water and open my mouth, then I close my mouth again and put my head under a little way. After watching me a few times, the child understands that he must have his head out of the water to breathe in and that he must close his mouth and not breathe if his head is below the water. We repeat this until the child has mastered the movements."

"Usually it takes about 15 to 20 lessons, though some children are exceptional and need less. I have a little boy of 10 months at the moment who learned to breathe properly after only 12 lessons. Since then we can't keep him out of the water! He comes with his mother and shouts with delight as soon as he sees the pool. Sometimes I dive down to about seven feet with him. He never swallows any water and never has the slightest trouble breathing."

The child's mother should always stay close at hand during a lesson. A sudden separation, particularly in unfamiliar surroundings, is terrifying for very young children and leads only to tension and tears. It takes far longer to teach an apprehensive or insecure child, and the results are never satisfactory.

When his mother stays with him, however, the child is happy and relaxed. He looks upon the teacher as his mother's friend, and trusts her accordingly. In an atmosphere of confidence he makes rapid progress. For such a child, the swimming pool will always remain, throughout his life, a place to have fun. (WFO)

MOTHER NOT ALWAYS BEST

In the Supreme Court sitting as Court of Civil Appeals Before Justices Landau, Etzioni and Kohn.

Hana Koppelman, Appellant v. Amikam Koppelman, Respondent (C.A. 43/72)

LAW REPORT

Edited by Doris Lankin

SUNDAY, JULY 16, 1972

Child of estranged parents better off in foster home

The Supreme Court dismissed an appeal against a decision of the Tel Aviv District Court delivered on December 25, 1971 (in C.C. 1204/71).

The appellant and respondent have been separated since 1967 but not divorced, since the respondent refuses to give the appellant a get. The couple's son was placed with foster parents by his mother when he was 19 months old as the mother was unable, due to ill-health, to care for him at the time. Three years later, when the mother had recovered her health, she wished to take the child back, but the father objected, applying to the District Court for an order restraining her from removing the child from his foster parents' home, or alternatively, for an order giving him custody of the child. The District Court decided that the child should remain with his foster parents for the time being, but that either of the parents could apply again for custody if there were a change in the objective circumstances.

The mother appealed against this decision to the Supreme Court. Mr. E. Malchuk appeared for the appellant and Mr. S. Freudenberg for the respondent.

Justice Kohn, who delivered the main opinion of the Supreme Court, Justice Landau concurring, noted that both the Social Welfare Office and a psychologist had recommended that the child be left in his foster home where he received loving care and affection and was being brought up with three other children, rather than be returned to the loneliness of his mother's home, where his presence might also serve as a bone of contention between his parents. In the circumstances the District Court had held, he noted further, that while it is true that in general a small child needs the love and care of its own mother more than anything else, in this particular case the good of the child demanded that he be left in his foster home.

He, for his part, held Justice Kohn, was of the opinion that the loneliness of the mother's life did not disqualify her from receiving custody of her child, but that a decisive consideration in deciding where the child should live was the well-founded fear that he might become the focus of friction between his parents if he went to live with either of them. On the other hand, he continued, it was not beyond the bounds of possibility that when the child grew older he might suffer from emotional doubts and conflicts due to feelings of "dual loyalty" to his foster family and to his parents. But if one were to choose between the fear of some such future possibility and the fear that the child would become a pawn in his parents' quarrels, then it were preferable to take the risk of leaving the child in his present home, where he is happy and well-adjusted, as, in any case, there was never an ideal solution for a child from a broken family. In any event, Justice Kohn stressed, the issue of a child's custody is never finally settled and the decision in the present case could always be rescinded with a change in circumstances.

As to what the nature of the change of circumstances should be, he was prepared, concluded Justice Kohn, to concede that there might be some ambiguity in the District Court's decision to the effect that its order was subject to change with an "objective change in circumstances," in view of the fact that section 74 of the Capacity and Guardianship Law provides that decisions on custody may be changed or rescinded "if the circumstances have changed or if new facts have come to light." He agreed, therefore, that the District Court's decision should be amended to bring it in line with section 74 by the removal of the word "objective" and that the appeal should be dismissed with this reservation.

Justice Etzioni, in concurring that the appeal should be dismissed, Justice Etzioni pointed out that the present arrangement for the child does not constitute a final solution of the question of who should have custody of him — his mother or his father — and that the court will eventually have to decide this issue. While it was true, therefore, that the present arrangement might be the most suitable temporary one, on the other hand, the very fact that the child was so happy in his foster home might only complicate the final solution of his custody later by creating serious emotional problems when it came to separating him from his foster parents.

He, for his part, he continued, was of the opinion that a child's rightful place was in the home of one his parents even if the conditions there were inferior to those he would enjoy in the home of strangers; and that there would have to be very serious and weighty reasons for denying the right of a mother, or father, to bring up and educate a child (see also C.A. 137/66, 3 P.D. 26/621).

In the present case, therefore, he was inclined to the opinion that while the child should be left temporarily in his foster home, one or other of his parents should apply again to the District Court, at the appropriate time, and ask it to rescind its present decision and that when this is done the District Court should decide which parent should have custody of the child. Appeal dismissed with IL300 costs.

Judgment given on June 19, 1972.

Egged seeks total monopoly

By ERNIE MEYER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Egged is demanding a virtual monopoly of road transport as well as a share in all other land transport schemes as its condition for agreeing to the Government-proposed merger with the Dan bus cooperative.

Responding to Transport Minister Shimon Peres' statement on Thursday supporting the eventual unification of Egged and Dan, the Egged spokesman told The Jerusalem Post that "if the Government wants a big unified cooperative, it must be prepared to give us the powers that go with it."

Egged's main terms for unification are:

- The Government must cover existing deficits, which are about IL40m. for Egged and IL59m. for Dan;
- The new cooperative should have the chance of becoming a partner in all future government plans concerning public transport, such as rapid transit systems and undergrounds, and the fast train link to Jerusalem, such participation to include investment by the cooperative;

- No additional licences would be issued to truckers to carry passengers;
- The cooperatives would be granted a monopoly to protect them against competition by shovels taxis, and others.

On Thursday, Mr. Peres told the Egged council meeting here that the Government will carry out the planned reorganization of Dan and Egged routes in Tel Aviv, whether or not the cooperatives themselves proceed with unification. The same would apply to the allocation of routes in the administered territories, the Minister said.

Asked whether the Government intends to use force to push through unification of the two cooperatives, Mr. Peres said: "I have come to persuade, not to apply pressure." Regarding the debt of close to IL100m. owed by both cooperatives, Mr. Peres indicated that after unification the Government would do its share to help them achieve a healthier situation. Mr. Peres made it quite clear that without merger the Government would not enter into the question of finances at all.

Social gap round table

By Lea Lovavi, Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — SOME people believe there is a confrontation between new immigrants and impoverished veteran Israelis, but Esther Herlitz — the Prime Minister's adviser on volunteer service — thinks both groups are equally deprived. "The new immigrant — whether he is a professor from New York, a professor from Moscow or an unskilled worker — has as many problems as the person who has been here for many years and is poor."

Mrs. Herlitz did not elaborate as much as she, and her listeners, would have liked because the Wizo "round table" at which she was speaking was devoted only to one side of the problem: narrowing the social and cultural gap between "the mainstream of society" and long-time residents who are still on "the fringe."

The "round table," attended by Wizo volunteers active in social service work, was held recently in Tel Aviv to sum up the organization's work in this field. Volunteers from Tel Aviv, Herzliya, Haifa and Jerusalem reported on their activities. The volunteer from Jerusalem told about the special summer camp for mothers of large families, recently held in the Jerusalem Forest as a cooperative venture of all the women's organizations.

Most of the other women, however, spoke about their work in schools and with the families of problem children. Many complained that professional workers and official bodies did not want to work with volunteers. "Before the State was established, volunteers were very active on welfare committees," a retired social worker explained. "But when the State came into existence, everyone thought volunteers would no longer be needed. Only now are we beginning to find out that the professionals — including the best and most dedicated of them — don't have the time for intensive, individual help in every case."

A volunteer who works at a Jaffa school explained what a volunteer's mean in everyday terms. She had begun tutoring an eighth grade pupil "but I soon saw the problem wasn't just arithmetic, or English or some other subject. I knew that unless I could help change things at home the best tutoring in the world would not be much use."

When she got to the home, she found the mother in disarray, the bed unmade and the three children running chaotically around the family's small one-room flat. The mother was barefoot; one shoe was on the bread-box, the other under the bed. "I started by persuading the mother to comb her hair, wear a clean dress and tidy the house. She said she did not care; she would do everything when they moved to the new flat they were promised in Yad Eliahu. I persuaded her to start now." The results, she added, were excellent. The girl, whose school attendance was never regular, now comes to school every day — and on time. "She told her teacher — and for me this was the climax — that even after the family moves she wants to continue going to school in her present neighbourhood with her friends."

NOON HOURS One problem which disturbed many of the volunteers is that most of the work offered to them involves being at the schools between noon and two — hours when housewives have to be home. Chava Chernoff, a counsellor and supervisor of teachers in schools for deprived children, suggested a solution: a programme of volunteer teachers aided or para-professionals who will work alongside the teacher during regular school hours. "The teacher could prepare material for the better students and let the volunteer work with them while she helps the slower — or vice versa. In any case, having an extra worker in the class will enable the teacher to work wherever she feels she can do the most good."

Mrs. Ben-Porath, treasurer of Wizo, pointed out that all the original volunteers for the opportunity to "listen and learn." Professor Benjamin Yancov of Bar-Ilan, however, had the last word: "Perhaps as a new immigrant I have a lot of nerve criticizing, but because I'm new maybe I'll be excused for not knowing better." He was most concerned by what was not said by other participants. Why didn't anyone talk about getting the husbands and children more involved in similar volunteer work? People complained about the professionals' reluctance to work with volunteers, but what can be done about it? "Most important of all, perhaps, how can we influence the politicians, officials and Knesset Members who make policy decisions?"

Drugs no longer needed

World Health Organization Reporter

GENEVA. — OPIUM, morphine and codeine are no longer indispensable in the practice of modern medicine, according to a scientific group of the World Health Organization (WHO), whose report is now published.

Medical needs for each year are now covered by a total of 1,350 tons of opium, but nearly as much — about 1,200 tons — reaches the illicit market in one form or another, and contributes to the drug dependence problem throughout the world.

The most important opiates (natural substances derived from the opium poppy) are morphine, used for the relief of moderate to severe pain, and codeine, used chiefly for control of cough and mild pain.

POSSIBLE SUBSTITUTES As possible substitutes for these products, two WHO experts reviewed available synthetic drugs and compared their effectiveness and their adverse effects with opiates of natural origin.

They conclude that synthetic compounds are available that are as effective as opiates for the relief of moderate to severe pain and, in some respects, may be superior to them.

The report also recommends that improved methods should be developed for assaying the therapeutic efficacy of repeated doses of analgesics and antitussives, and that facilities for clinical trials be increased. There is an urgent need for training programmes in this field of pharmacology.

Thirteen experts were invited from Belgium, Egypt, France, Germany (Fed. Rep.), India, Japan, Senegal, Thailand, the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R., and representatives of the United Nations Narcotic Drugs Division and the International Narcotics Control Board attended the session of the study group.

BELGRADE (UPI). — AT Marx and Engels Square, huge portraits of the two founders of Socialism look gravely down on a garish display of girls' magazines. Yugoslav children can learn their first lessons in female anatomy on a stroll down Revolution Boulevard or Marshall Tito Street, where kiosks display the centerfold proportions of the "Lepotice" — Yugoslav beauty — in blushing detail.

Western decadence? "No, sex magazines are just another way in which Yugoslavia is socially and economically more free than other Communist countries," said Ljubisa Kozomara, who edits the mass circulation "Chik" magazine.

With its panoply of bare-bottomed beauties and tales of adventure, "Chik" is Yugoslavia's largest circulation magazine at 400,000 copies a month. It heads an entire list of risqué reading matter which has shoved off the newstands all but one or two of the most serious political publications.

A slightly more refined version of "Chik" is "Eva I Adam" the glossy Yugoslav "review of love, and sexual education," where photos of buxom nudes are sandwiched between articles on literature, psychology, and the medical aspects of sex.

SEXUALLY INFORMED "We're trying to get at the housewife who is more house than wife — she has a right to be sexually informed," said Alexander Badanjak, "Eva I Adam's" gregarious editor.

The door to Badanjak's office is appropriately adorned with a figleaf. A balding, bespectacled editor who used to write political and economic articles, Badanjak may be Yugoslavia's closest thing to a crusader for women's lib, gay lib, and sexual freedom.

"I'm engaged in a kind of personal revolution — a fight against all the taboos. It was only 20 years ago that women in some parts of this country started removing their Modest veils," Badanjak said.

"I believe I'm doing some very human work. We publish letters from homosexuals who are still arrested and jailed in this country. We give advice to village girls too ashamed to take their problems to a doctor," he said. "It's psychiatry in a primitive way."

In many villages physicians still refuse to treat diseases which suggest social impropriety, such as venereal disease. "This is the only place some people can turn to," said Badanjak, who sips tomato juice and Turkish coffee all day long. Badanjak is aware of the women's liberation movement. "But, let's face it. Most Yugoslav women aren't at the stage which American women have reached. It's an extraordinary thing for a woman to have a job at all here, where most are tending the cows and chickens at home."

PICTURES OF NUDES

Both Kozomara and Badanjak agreed that publishing pictures of nude men and women with articles on sex would have been impossible in Yugoslavia ten years ago. "When I started this magazine, I thought I would be arrested," Badanjak said. The "Eva I Adam" editor in fact was called into court last year in a state prosecution effort to stop publication of one issue. But Badanjak argued that the nude photos in the issue were art. The court ruled in his favour, and the magazine appeared on schedule.

Classics comeback for men's clothes

TEL AVIV. — A RETURN to the classic look is reported by three of the foremost creators of Israeli menswear for local and export markets.

At a first-time joint showing last week at the Tiffany Club — the Dan Hotel here O.B.G. of Tel Aviv, Dimona Knits of Dimona Fibres Ltd. and Niba Fashions, sportswear stylists, combined to illustrate more than 25 combinations of striking men's fashions. They all reflected the international return to the "refined" look for the rugged male. O.B.G., the well-known men's store, that has branches in the main cities, contributed a host of jackets, slacks, and suits; Niba — dress and sports shirts; and Dimona Fibres — the polyester collection of contemporary fashions — all available at the O.B.G. stores.

According to Nancy Kaplan, former "Women's Wear Daily" staff member, who staged the male appeal showing, "Gone is the mod or masquerade look of the 'sixties and in its place — the look to spring you into every season — all that is refined, shaped, and impeccable. This "classic" interpretation, English in its feeling for understatement in colour and tailoring, underlies the 1972-73 O.B.G., Niba and Dimona Knits Collection. Dedicated to the mobile man of today, it is a collection without season, adaptable to every climate and occasion."

Natural shoulders, fitted waists, wide lapels and patched pockets were highlighted in the tri-operative showing.

Wide lapels, double-breasted pin stripe suit of regulation length — a comfort to the average man now that classics are in again.

Rational allocation of campus funds urged

Jerusalem Post Reporter
HAIFA. Prof. Rachel Shalom, Vice-President of the Technion, on Friday made an eloquent plea for a more rational distribution of public funds among institutions of higher learning.
 Speaking at the Engineers Forum here, she said that ten years ago there were only three universities. Today there are seven. The number of students had risen from 11,000 to 42,300 in a decade in which the population had grown by 50 per cent and the Gross National Product had little more than doubled.
 "Is 42,300 little or much? Our potential is almost fully exploited. We occupy fourth place in the proportion of students in the general population, behind the U.S., the Soviet Union and Japan, but ahead of Europe. Until 1976 the number of students will grow by 300 to 400 altogether every year. These figures," she said, "do not take into account the projected open university, which working people will be able to attend without leaving their jobs."
 The joint budgets of the universities had risen from IL30m. in 1961 to IL590m. (nearly 15 times). In 1963, the Government had financed half their cost, this year it covered 69 per cent. Tuition fees covered a third of the operating budgets in the humanities, seven per cent in engineering, four in medicine. High school tuition fees were higher than in universities, Prof. Shalom said.
 She pleaded for more income tax deductions on smaller contributions to encourage alumni to support their alma mater. The Government's policy of subsidizing development budgets at the rate of 50 to 100 agorot for each pound was "a mixed blessing," unless investment and development were controlled because of future maintenance costs.
 Ten years ago, universities accounted for 13 per cent of the total education budget. This year they claimed 29 per cent, compared with 17.7 for high school education, she said.
 Prof. Shalom urged a re-consideration of the complex problem. She recommended new criteria, free from pressures and "holy cows," and a scale of priorities adjusted to the country's needs.
 Education Minister Alon had enacted a rule that a prior permit was now needed to open or expand a university, which she thought was a step in the right direction.
 In 1970, a committee had been established (of which she is chairman) to develop new criteria for funding the universities. An interim report was submitted to the Council for Higher Education in March and a final report will be made at the end of the year. "If the Council accepts our recommendations, the situation will improve, I hope," Prof. Shalom said.

Ben-Aharon back, repeats call for war economy

LOD AIRPORT. — Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon reaffirmed his faith in the capitalist world of tomorrow as he returned to Israel Friday from a World Confederation of Free Trade Unions conference in London.
 Mr. Ben-Aharon's suggestions to institute a "war economy" much like Yugoslavia's or Chile's had stirred up considerable controversy before his departure abroad.
 "The time has definitely come to decide what kind of society we aspire to," he said. "We are rooted in socialism and Zionism not in the capitalist world of tomorrow as the vultures of free enterprise. Whoever hasn't yet faced up to this issue will have to do so now," the former Ashdod party leader said.
 The issues are too serious to be exposed to "unfavourable interpretation at the low educational level of the Israeli public," he declared. Nevertheless he was glad that the discussion of his proposals had begun. "The fight over them is only foam on the surface of the water," the Secretary-General said.
 He was convinced that the prestige of the labour movement would benefit from the debate over socialism.
 Nearly 30 members of the Histadrut Central Committee and employees of the Histadrut Executive came to the airport to welcome Mr. Ben-Aharon home. (Ithm)

Bar-Lev says only reform needed

TEL AVIV. — Reform, not a revolution, is the answer to most of the problems we face internally, Commerce and Industry Minister Elam Bar-Lev said Friday.
 The Minister, addressing the economic and political club of the Histadrut in Tel Aviv, said that we are not at war, and a war economy was not justified. In an oblique but obvious counter-argument to the stand expressed by Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon, (who returned Friday from an international trade union conference in London), Mr. Bar-Lev said that Israel's economy is at a peak of development, with over-employment, a great deal of on-going investment, and a constant growth in manpower through immigration.
 "While in many areas we have not yet met the standards we desire," the Minister emphasized, "we face no problem which calls for a revolution. Revolutions destroy that which exists, and only then begin to build anew, he said. (Ithm)

Israeli youth basketballers score upset

TEL AVIV. — Israel made a successful debut in the European youth basketball championship, winning its first game against Spain 62-59. The championships are being played in Zadar, Yugoslavia. In its group, Israel has still to meet Poland, Turkey, the U.S.S.R. and Hungary.
 The Israeli victory over the favoured Spanish came as a surprise. At halftime, Israel led 34-23.
 Best for Israel were Berkowitz with 29 points and Zachs 21 points. Israel plays Poland today. The Poles yesterday beat Turkey 72-63.
 The surprise result of the opening day was the victory of Hungary over the U.S.S.R., the champions, by 63-53.

American-Israeli Dialogue Aug. 1

The Relationship between Jews and Revolutionary Forces" will be the theme of the 10th annual American-Israeli Dialogue, sponsored by the American Jewish Congress. It will be held August 1 to 4 at the Van Leer Institute in Jerusalem.
 The Dialogue participants will examine the role that various elements of the Jewish community have played in revolutionary movements, as well as the impact that revolutionary political changes have had — and are likely to have — on Jewish life throughout the world.

Dan, Nili crews want special pay

HAIFA. — The Seamen's Union has warned the Zim passengers company that it will take sanctions unless the firm honours an agreement on special leave pay for its crews of the Dan and Nili ferry boats.
 The pay promised was for a period equivalent to a round trip for a crew member completed six consecutive trips. The company's board of directors agreed on condition that the union permit the crews on the two ships to be reduced during the winter off-season. The union has declined to meet this condition.

1972 Israel Festival begins

The Israel Festival opened at Bayenet Ha'oma last night, in the presence of Premier Golda Meir and other VIPs.
 The first event was a concert by the Israel Philharmonic, conducted by Daniel Barenboim, and the Scottish National Orchestra Chorus, led by John Currie. The programme consisted of the world premiere of "Dedication" by Sergiu Natra, and Brahms' "Requiem".

GOLF RESULTS

CESAREA. — In yesterday's individual Stableford golf competition, the "A" division was won by Irving Levinson of Tel Aviv with 38 points. Runner-up was Harry Brodie of Kfar Shimaryahu with 35 points.
 The "B" division was won by Len Barrett of Herzliya Pituah with 38 points, followed by Yoram Mendel of Savyon with 32 points.

Summer visitors come for medical care

Jerusalem Post Reporter
 The wave of Arab summer visitors this year has already seen three patients accepted for treatment in Israeli hospitals, after their families tried in vain to get satisfactory medical care in Jordan.
 Deputy Health Minister Abdul Aziz Zuabi told The Post that in a day or two Nuheila Suleiman, 10, would enter Hadassah Medical Centre in Jerusalem for an eye operation. Doctors in Amman said they could do nothing to stop her going blind in a year or two. Hadassah's eye doctors had examined Nuheila and agreed to operate.
 Barier, a girl from Zarqa, Dallah Samih Ghanem, 9, had been accepted by Hadifa's Rambam Hospital for two bone operations which, it was hoped, would prevent her staying permanently in a wheelchair. Last week, an elderly man from Amman, Saba Tewfik Sakim, entered Tel Hashomer for internal treatment.
 Mr. Zuabi told The Post that summer visitors from the Arab countries often come to his Nazareth home, straight from the Jordan bridges, to ask his advice or help on where to get medical treatment. He said that patients who had money, or whose relatives here had money, would pay a part of the medical bills.
 Mr. Zuabi, whose clan has important branches in Jordan, told The Post: "One person cured is worth a dozen speeches."

Plan to build Eilat refinery rouses storm

Threats of increased pollution in Eilat and Beerseba touched off a stormy debate in the Knesset Committee on Ecology, which met Friday to discuss a report by California expert Robert Chass.
 The Committee never got around to discussing the items on its agenda, as Knesset Member Mordechai Surkis expressed grave concern over plans to establish a crude-oil refinery in Eilat.
 Committee Chairman Yosef Tamir read out a letter he had received from Deputy Finance Minister Zvi Dinstein, who said that while conditions in Eilat have changed sufficiently in recent years to allow such a refinery to be established there in harmony with the City's master plan, it has not yet been decided to do so. The project might well be moved to Sinal, near the Netivot Neft installations, the letter said.
 At the same time, Mr. Dinstein said, should the plant be established in Eilat, it will be done in coordination with ecological considerations.
 Dr. Baruch Fades, the Health Ministry's Director-General, who took part in the meeting, informed the Committee that this was the first he had heard of the refinery project. At that point, a number of Committee members angrily decided to summon the heads of the petroleum commission to an urgent meeting.
 However, even at this point the Committee could not get to its scheduled agenda. In an unscheduled move, Mr. Tamir presented a petition signed by 2,000 of Beerseba's residents, protesting plans for expansion of the Makteshim Chemical Works (a Koor subsidiary) in the centre of town.
 Amid complaints by the Health Ministry representatives that its pollution prevention unit is often circumvented and presented with a fait accompli, the Committee decided to have the matter brought up for discussion in the Knesset.

Larger grants urged for multiple births

Jerusalem Post Reporter
 Women who bear triplets will get a sizeable grant from the National Insurance Institute, under a recommendation from the Motherhood Committee of the Institute's Council. The Minister of Labour has to approve the recommendation.
 The Committee would give the mother of triplets a one-time grant of IL3,750 when the third child is discharged from hospital. It also recommended that the maternity grant on the birth of twins be increased from IL1,080 to IL1,470 and on the birth of triplets from IL1,645 to IL1,680.
 Another recommendation was for the payment of IL7,600 to families in which the mother dies in childbirth so long as the newborn child is not being kept in some welfare institution.

Driver cleared in road death of four

TEL AVIV. — A postal-truck driver was Thursday cleared of causing the death of four people in a collision which took place in December 1970.

The accident occurred at the Mita-Ras Sudar intersection in Sinal. The post-office truck driven by Ezra Yeheskel collided with a passenger car which came from the right. Killed in the collision were: Arnon Ramzli, the car's driver; a hitchhiker sitting next to him; and two postal workers who sat in the cabin with Yeheskel.

Ezra Yeheskel was charged in the Magistrates Court with causing the fatalities by failing to yield to a vehicle coming from his right. However, the defence was able to establish that the car appeared suddenly from behind a truck which was approaching the intersection, passing it at great speed. The court accepted the defence claim that under the circumstances the defendant could not anticipate such an accident, nor prevent it. (Ithm)

Child wins suit for doctor's negligence

An 11-year-old girl who lost the end of her little finger seven years ago won IL10,000 in damages against a Jerusalem Kipat Holim doctor in the Magistrate's Court on Friday.

The girl, Shulamit Cohen, from Beit Shean, had a door slammed on her finger while she was visiting Jerusalem in 1965. She was taken to the Straus Kipat Holim clinic, where Dr. H. Hartoch put the fractured finger in plaster and told her to come back the next day.
 Shulamit returned with her father.

Court recess begins today

Courts begin their summer recess today. It will run until August 31. During this month-and-a-half, the Supreme Court will meet only if its President or his deputy decide that a particular matter cannot wait, and then only for one hearing a week.
 The other courts — district courts, magistrates' courts and execution offices — will deal only with civil actions for summary judgments; criminal trials involving persons who are willing to plead guilty; applications from the tax assessor, maintenance payments, and orders for arrest or for release from prison. (Ithm)

GNP NOW EQUALS EGYPT'S

The Gross National Product in 1972 will equal that of Egypt for the first time since the establishment of the State, Mr. Avraham Agmon, Director-General of the Finance Ministry, said Friday.
 Mr. Agmon was speaking to the secretariat of the Jerusalem Labour Council and the secretaries of the Capital's labour unions. He emphasized that the same G.N.P. was produced by three million people in Israel. Egypt's population is 35 million.
 He added that exports will total about $2,100m. this year, and imports about $4,300m. At the same time, the national debt, which was $1,100m. before the Six Day War, has grown to nearly $4,000m., he said.
 Mr. David Horowitz, former Governor of the Bank of Israel and now chairman of its advisory council, discussed the national debt on an Israel Radio interview Friday night. He pointed out that while foreign currency reserves have reached a level of about $1,000m., the national debt per capita is now the highest in the world.
 He noted the fact that a good portion of the debt is in the form of Israel Bonds, which is a long term and relatively convenient obligation. (Ithm)

Verdict in Okamoto trial due tomorrow

Jerusalem Post Reporter
 ZRIFIN. — The military tribunal trying Kozo Okamoto for his part in the May 30 massacre at Lod Airport will hand down its verdict tomorrow morning.
 In anticipation of a big rush of local and foreign journalists, the Army spokesman's office announced over Israel Radio that all the visitor's tags to the trial had been cancelled. (These exclude journalists and foreign diplomats.) Any visitors wishing to attend have to renew their passes, and their requests will be rechecked.

Curfew hours again cut in Gaza Strip

Shorter curfew hours go into effect in the Gaza Strip today, a reflection of the continued quiet in the area. The new regulations, which follow an earlier reduction on April 1, leave only the following curfew hours:
 • In urban areas, including refugee camps — from midnight to 3 a.m. (instead of from 10 p.m. to 3 a.m. in the towns and from 8 p.m. to 3 a.m. in the refugee camps).
 • In open areas — from 10 p.m. to 3 a.m. (instead of from 8 p.m. to 3 a.m.).
 • In a 500-metre-wide strip along the "Green Line" and a 300-metre-wide strip along the shore — from 8 p.m. to 3 a.m., except in built-up areas, which have only the midnight to 3 a.m. curfew.

No hangars for 'jumbos'

LOD AIRPORT. — Lack of hangar space is holding up the applications of two foreign airlines to increase their Boeing 747 jumbo flights to Israel, it was learned Thursday.
 The two firms — Air France and TWA — already use Lod as a stop on jumbo flights to the Far East. But the requests of each to add a weekly jumbo flight which would include an overnight stay here have had to be rejected because the existing four jumbo berths (outside of the El Al hangars) are already fully booked.
 The airport hopes to solve the problem with the construction of four new hangars budgeted for 1972/73. (Ithm)

Police solve 35-40% of bank heists

TEL AVIV. — The police solve between 35 and 40 per cent of the bank robberies, and is no less efficient in this respect than the world's best police forces, Nitzav Yehuda Prag, Tel Aviv District police commander, said Friday.
 Nitzav Prag and Bank Leumi's Assistant General Manager, Mr. Shmuel Tulchinsky, were interviewed on Israel Radio Friday night.
 Nitzav Prag said that the police have managed to prevent many bank holdups from taking place. He explained that when informed of a robbery, police surround the area first, and only then do the patrols go to the bank itself.
 Nevertheless, he claimed, even in a district as crowded as Tel Aviv, it does not take more than 10 minutes to reach the bank, and no more than two or three minutes to close off the neighbourhood.
 Mr. Tulchinsky indicated that the banks have recently begun to take new security measures against robberies. He declined to describe them, however.
 He did reveal that banks plan to install time locks on safes enabling them to be opened only 15 minutes after the key is inserted or the combination spun.
 The Bank Leumi official said that cashiers have been instructed not to resist holdups, so as not to endanger lives. (Ithm)

Youth jailed for burning dog

PETAH TIKVA. — A 19-year-old resident of this city, Ya'acov Wahab, who burnt to death a dog he had stolen, was sentenced to three months in jail on Friday by Petah Tikva Magistrate Aryeh Graf.
 Wahab, of the Amishav quarter here, seized the dog with the aid of a friend while the animal was out walking with its master on the outskirts of town. Wahab first tried to throw the animal into a well. When this failed, he poured a can of petrol over the dog and set it alight.
 Wahab was also given a three-month suspended sentence which can be activated over the next three years. His companion was acquitted. (Ithm)

June cooler than average, some rain

June was cooler than average. In northern and central Israel appreciable rains occurred, the Meteorological Department reports.
 Monthly mean temperatures were below the average values of various stations by 0.2°C to 1°C. The extreme maximum temperatures were recorded mainly on the 19th. The extreme minimum temperatures were recorded on the first days of the month, mainly on the 1st. The extreme temperatures did not reach notable values.

 Monthly mean relative humidity exceeded the normal values of most stations by less than 10 per cent.
 There was rain on several days in the northern and central regions. Appreciable amounts (1-10mm.) were registered mainly on the 9th, with several stations registering even larger values (Binyamina 14mm., Dan 17mm.).

Chief Rabbi elections again put off

Jerusalem Post Reporter
 The chairman of the committee preparing elections of new Chief Rabbi, Mr. Mordechai Surkis, has asked to postpone the poll till August 31. The request is addressed to the Minister for Religious Affairs.
 The committee charged Mr. Surkis with seeing that the request is dealt with in the Knesset this week.
 The Chief Rabbis are now serving long beyond their stipulated terms because of previous postponements of elections. Under the most recent Cabinet decision on the issue, elections were to have been held August 1.

ZOA LEADER: Immigration from U.S. will grow

Jerusalem Post Reporter
 TEL AVIV. — Immigration from America will grow from year to year, and the identification of our children with Israel will intensify more and more — but out of love for Israel, not fear for America.

This was stated last night by Dr. Max Nussbaum, who chaired the session of the Zionist Organization of America's current convention. He assailed the "doom preachers" of the "radical Jewish right, in Israel and the United States," who contend that immigration from America should be predicated on a fear of anti-Semitism.

Dr. Nussbaum said that American Zionism did not evolve from "economic strangulation, political persecution or anti-Semitic harassment, but was born in freedom and conceived in liberty out of purely altruistic motives."

On Friday, the convention held an assembly at the Kennedy Memorial in Jerusalem, under the auspices of the J.N.F., and celebrated the 20th anniversary of the Z.O.A. House in Tel Aviv at an Oney Shabbat. The convention continues today at Z.O.A. House.

Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York, who was to address last night's session and had to cancel his visit because of the death two days ago of his wife's mother, asked that excerpts from his address be read out.

Israel's survival is no longer threatened, a peace in which the rights and sovereign integrity of neighbours are respected.

"I have long felt a deep, close, personal attachment to Israel," he wrote. "My father, a deeply religious man, was engrossed by the Holy Land. One result was his creation of the Palestine Archaeological Museum, opposite the Old City of Jerusalem, and which I visited in 1930."

Both Mr. Menahem Begin, the Herut leader, and Mr. Arye Dulzin, the Treasurer of the Jewish Agency, stressed the "inalienable right of the Jewish people" to the land of Israel. Mr. Dulzin suggested a Palestinian state might be created east of the Jordan river "if the Palestinians decide one day they form a national entity."

It was the existence of Israel, and not its borders, which was the cause of conflict in the Arab eyes, Mr. Dulzin added. When the Zionist movement was born, there were 200,000 Arabs in Palestine. When the British came in 1918, there were 500,000. "It was Jewish immigration which brought them."

Mr. Begin said President Sadat of Egypt was using a "Mein Kampf" description of the Jews, while the Organisation of African Unity, which supported the Arab claim to fight Israel "by all means," also echoed Hitler.

Index down 1.4% in June; rose 5.4% in six months

Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter
 The consumers' price index declined by 1.4 per cent in June (average for 1969: 100.0), according to the Central Bureau of Statistics.

Excluding fruit and vegetables, whose price dropped by over one-fifth due to seasonal factors, the index rose slightly, by 0.3 per cent.

Price rises during the first half of 1972 (excluding, again, fruit and vegetables) was 5.4 per cent. Chief increase was in housing prices, up by 6 per cent. Footwear rose by 12.9 per cent, due largely to a rise in the cost of imported hides.

Separate indices measuring input costs of building and agriculture reveal that wage expenses per workday rose in those branches during the six-month period by 10-15 per cent.

Sources in the Government point out that the 5.4 per cent index rise is slower than in the preceding six months, and they expect a slower rise still (of around three per cent) in the second half of this year. This is on the assumption that wage increases do not get out of hand, and that no indirect taxes are imposed, they stress.

Mr. Uriel Abramovich, head of the Histadrut's Trade Union Department, commented to The Jerusalem Post last night: "We have been waiting for the CBS figures, and shall now decide what to do. Prices have risen sharply, and some people think there should be an exceptional mid-year Cost-of-Living Allowance (though the allowance is normally adjusted once a year, in January)."

"Others say that greater flexibility on the part of employers in concluding current wage negotiations would be sufficient," he added.

Deep penetration bombing made Egypt accept cease-fire

Jerusalem Post Reporter
 TEL AVIV. — "The deep penetration bombings during the war of attrition hurt Egypt and caused Cairo to agree to a cease-fire and keep it," Aluf Mordechai Hod, O.C. Air Force, said on Friday night. He was speaking in an interview on television commemorating Air Force Day, which will be celebrated with a fly-past on Tuesday.

Aluf Hod said that if hostilities started, the Air Force would renew its deep penetration air strikes.

Asked about recent press reports that the Americans had managed to penetrate the Soviet-designed air defences of North Vietnam, Aluf Hod said this meant any defence line could be penetrated. The Egyptians would have to study what is occurring in Vietnam as less than Israel. "I hope they will learn not to put their defences to the test," he said.

The only difference between operational flights and training is the fact that in the latter, we are flying inside our borders and nobody is shooting at us. Otherwise training is very much the same as operational flying," he said.

Concerning the Hasbaya incident, in which a number of Lebanese civilians were killed because of a mistake in bombing, Aluf Hod said this was a regrettable incident. Israel had not changed its convictions about not hitting civilian targets. But at the same time, he believed the incident had been exaggerated out of proportion. "We shouldn't forget," Aluf Hod said, "that a few hours earlier a bus full of Israeli civilians had been shot at with a bazooka shell. This incident could have been many times worse than what happened at Hasbaya."

Tried for sending boy to rob and murder

TEL AVIV. — Murder by agent is the charge facing a Jaffa man who went on trial on Friday. He is accused of sending an 11-year-old street urchin on a mission of robbery which ended in the death of an elderly Tel Aviv jeweller.

The man, 28-year-old Haim Shoshan — who denied the charges — is said to have sent the boy out on December 6 to rob an elderly jeweller, Eliezer Weinberg. The boy, who was himself sentenced last month, followed Weinberg home and bashed in his head with an iron bar, allegedly supplied by Shoshan.

The identity of the killer remained a mystery until about six months after the murder, when the boy attacked a woman in the same area with a plank. The woman's description led to his arrest.

The boy told his questioners he had worked alone, but later allegedly implicated Shoshan.

Shoshan at first denied any connection with the boy, but broke down when the latter identified various items he said he had stolen on a robbing mission for the Jaffa man, including a gold ring which Shoshan was wearing. At Friday's opening session of Shoshan's trial, the three-man District Court bench, consisting of Judges Zeev Zeltner (president), Moshe Beisky and Shlomo Wallenstein, heard testimony from the police and from the doctor who discovered the body of the murdered jeweller. They set the next sitting for some time after the current court recess, which ends on August 31.

The boy, who is now 13, was sentenced on June 15 to remain under the supervision of a probation officer until he reaches 21 — the most serious punishment which the law provides for a minor.

GAP GROWING

The gap between the air forces of Israel and Egypt has grown since the Six Day War, especially since the cease-fire went into effect. The Egyptian Air Force has grown in numbers, but we have grown in quality. Our situation has much improved, and the Egyptians know they cannot penetrate deep into Israel, said Aluf Hod.

Report today on study of Tel Aviv subway

TEL AVIV. — The study committee on the possibilities of a Tel Aviv subway system is to submit its report today, Mr. Shimon Peres, Minister of Transport said here Friday.

Mr. Peres, who was speaking at the Beit Brenner club, said that the best solution to the worsening transportation situation in the cities is to go underground. Israel will be able to receive low-interest international loans from a number of countries for this project, he added.

He disclosed that over 1/2m. workers in the country travel to work, wasting a percentage of their working hours. The number of hours is likely to increase as the congestion on the roads increases, and there is a need to build a new public transportation system.

The best solution for inter-urban travel would be fast electric trains that would connect the three main cities, shortening the time it takes to and from work, from two or three hours, to about half-an-hour.

Concerning air transport, the Minister said that today a decision will be reached either at the weekly meeting of the Cabinet or at the Ministerial Economic Committee, whether or not to buy a third jumbo 747 jet for El Al. The hope is that by 1975 El Al will have five jumbo jets.

By 1975, also, Israel hopes to reach a five million ton shipping fleet, Mr. Peres added. For comparison, the Minister stated that Russia today has a fleet of 25 million tons.

Mystery man Joseph 'G' is back

AFULA. — The mysterious "Joseph G" Givon (Gutman), who according to stories told by himself and by friends has met with Stalin, de Gaulle, Mao Tse-Tung, and Ho Chi Min among others, returned to Israel on Friday after a five-year absence. He told "Itim" here he had spent most of this time in the Soviet Union where he worked for the emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel. "I think I was successful."

Givon, 45, was interviewed before leaving for a kibbutz in the area to visit friends.

Limping with his left arm paralyzed, Givon said he had been beaten up in Russia by eight K.G.B. men who said he was guilty of incitement and of giving Hebrew lessons in Moscow. Nevertheless, he planned to return to the U.S.S.R. in several months.

He claimed that last spring he visited China and met with Chou En-lai. He had also spoken with the Premier of North Vietnam: "I have friends all over the world and they arranged the meeting."

He said he will leave next month and after winding up his affairs abroad will settle in Jerusalem and set up a film company together with American and French investors.

Police grab 30 kilos of hashish

TEL AVIV. — Police uncovered a cache of 30 kilos of hashish in a dustbin in Holon on Friday. The find was worth tens of thousands of pounds, they said.

Acting on a tip from informers, narcotics police raided a shack in the Jessy Cohen Quarter. After a search, they found the drug in a dustbin.

The people who live in the shack, a man of 28 and a woman of 22, were detained for interrogation.

According to "Itim," police believe the drug came from a big dope ring. They are now lying they are on the track of trying to find out where the drug came from. (Itim)

Almogi envisages end to poverty

HAIFA. — Poverty will be liquidated in ten to 15 years by the combined effects of unemployment insurance, National Health Insurance, invalidity insurance and the National Pension Law, Labour Minister Yosef Almogi said here on Friday.

Speaking at the Haifa Labour Council, he said that the Health Insurance Bill was now before the Ministerial Committee for Legislation and would soon be tabled in the Knesset.

He thought there was no need to import unskilled workers from abroad.

Man gets life for killing mother-in-law

A 43-year-old East Jerusalem man who murdered his mother-in-law and seriously injured his wife and two other women last year on Friday sentenced to life imprisonment and a concurrent 20 years in jail by the Jerusalem District Court.

The man, Ahmed Ali Shennir — whose lawyer described him as a former Israeli security agent — went to his mother-in-law's Wadi Joz home on April 7, 1971, to try to bring back his estranged wife. When he failed to persuade her to return, he took out his unlicensed revolver and emptied it into everyone present in the room.

The shots killed Shennir's mother-in-law and seriously wounded his wife, her sister and another woman. Shennir, who is said to have spent 17 years in Syrian and Jordanian jails for his work for Israeli intelligence, then went north, where he was caught not far from the Lebanese border.

In addition to the murder charge, the prosecution had sought to have Shennir convicted of attempted murder, illegal possession of arms and attempted illegal exit from Israel. Shennir's lawyer had sought to have the charge reduced to manslaughter, stating that his client had acted under provocation and mentioning the sentences he said Shennir had served for Israel. (Itim)

Man stabs five in U.S. bus station

TACOMA, Washington (AP). — A knife-wielding man who attacked five persons at a bus depot here on Friday night was listed in critical condition yesterday after being shot by a bus driver.

The five were all listed in satisfactory condition with stab wounds they suffered when the assailant suddenly attacked, police said.

Police identified the assailant only as a 23-year-old Tacoma resident who had boarded a bus at Portland, Oregon, with most of the other passengers.

Detective John Vejvoda said the attacker stepped off the bus behind a 32-year-old girl and then began stabbing her in the back. When she fell, the man reportedly went back aboard the bus and began attacking other passengers.

Detective Vejvoda said the assailant turned to leave the bus and was met at the exit by gunfire from a bus driver, who had carried a pistol in his travel bag and rushed to the scene, Mr. Vejvoda said.

The driver of the bus which carried the group from Portland said there had been no incidents during the trip which might have precipitated the attacks.

ACHZIV FESTIVAL PROVES A FIASCO

NAHARIYA. — A great fiasco marked the first festival organized by Eli Avivi at Achziv, and his problems are not over. He is likely to face a law suit in its wake.

About 5,000 people came to take part in the Festival Friday evening, overflowing the parking space available, and crowding both sides of the Nahariya-Rosh Hanikra road. Many of the guests were under the impression that admission was free, and when they were asked to pay I.L.I.0, preferred to break through the fences surrounding Avivi's house.

According to Avivi, the number of those who broke in was larger than that of those who paid.

Because of the traffic tie-up and the confusion at the solitary admission gate, even the festival artists had difficulty entering.

On Friday, before the festival, the Acre Magistrate's Court dismissed two of three charges instituted against Avivi by the Sulam Zur Regional Council. Avivi was charged with preparing and holding a public entertainment event and with selling tickets for it without a permit.

Judge Amnon Carmi dismissed the first two charges as the affair had not yet taken place, but forbade Avivi to sell any tickets, as he had no permit. He emphasized that dismissal of the charges may not be construed as permission by the court to hold the event.

It is expected that now that the festival did take place, without a permit, the Regional Council will once more charge Avivi with the offences. In addition, Avivi will likely be sued by the National Parks Authority for damage caused to the fences and the national park at Achziv. (Itim)

Patterson warms up for Ali match

NEW YORK (Reuter). — Former heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson, claiming he is improving with age, tuned up for next month's clash with Muhammad Ali by stopping Puerto Rican Pedro Agosto in the sixth round of their fight here Friday night.

The referee halted the one-sided bout because of a bad cut over Agosto's left eye. A New Jersey tree-sprayer, Agosto was hampered after breaking his left hand in the second round when he also sustained a cut eye.

Thirty-seven year-old Patterson, who will meet Ali at Madison Square Garden here on August 28, was sharp, battering the plodding Agosto with crisp combinations from the opening bell.

Agosto was plainly outclassed as Patterson, twice holder of the world title, chalked up the 55th victory of his 20-year professional career. It was Agosto's fourth defeat in 28 fights.

Another spy hanged in Seoul

SEOUL (Reuter). — A man convicted of spying for North Korea was hanged in Seoul prison yesterday, the Justice Ministry announced. He was Chul-lak Kim, 38, a journalist, who had been in prison awaiting execution since July 1969.

He was the second Communist spy to be executed here this week — on Thursday former National Assembly Representative Kyu-nam Kim was executed for his part in a North Korean spy ring.

Three more North Korean spies were sentenced to death by the Seoul district court yesterday. They were members of an espionage ring rounded up last April as they tried to send a birthday gift to North Korean Premier Kim Il-sung on his 60th birthday.
